Living on Half a Dime a Day

When Civil War Widow Sarah Elizabeth Harper Monmouth found herself suddenly poor, crippled and sick, she was forced to live on a $40 annual income for a period of 3 years. In this book, she describes the measures she took to live in such poverty, revealing how she did the math, portioned out her days, and made do with every earthly possession she had at her disposal. What emerges is an often inspiring narrative on how the human spirit can learn to gain satisfaction from hard-won victories in the face of total despair. This unabridged recording is available to download from Librivox.org.
